Emily McDonald
Oct 7, 2018
Assignment 5 Reflection

       I'm overall very happy with how my website turned out, but the thing I struggled with the most was getting two div blocks on the same line and getting the text blocks over the picture divs. I didn't understand that a div inherently fills the whole width of the page, and I worked with a friend (thanks Kunal) in SSUI, and he explained that to me, and that I can fix my problem by setting the display of the divs to inline-block and changing the positions of the picture and text blocks. After I got that problem solved, the rest of it was smooth.

       I hoped to represent the bakery as comfortable but polished, and I think I got that across by decreasing the opacity to make the website look soft, but I kept all of the lines very clean and the site overall as minimalist as I could to get the vibe across.

Sources:

Kunal Bhuwalka for explaining html and css to me conceptually

Images:

Foodnetwork.com (x2)

Chowhound.com

Cooking4students YouTube channel

Kingarthurflour.com

Familymealblog.com

Pillsbury.com

Pitchounbakery.com